

Rigid cervical collar

McKesson's rigid cervical collar is a one-piece, adjustable extrication collar designed to immobilize a patient's neck, support the head, and maintain alignment. Designed to fit most users, the rigid collar features four height options and hook-and-loop fastening to accommodate varying neck sizes. Dual locking tabs help secure the size position and enable symmetrical alignment. In addition to fitting most users, the collar is designed to help promote safety and convenience. Made with radiolucent materials and shaped with an oversized tracheal hole and large rear-panel opening, the collar may remain in place while undergoing MRI/CT scans and provides access and visibility during procedures and exams. Cannula hooks integrated on either side of the collar secure supplemental oxygen devices and minimize the patient's discomfort related to tubing.

Features and benefits

- Used to immobilize a patient's neck and maintain its proper alignment
- Sized to fit most adults
- Height-adjustable design features neck-length size windows denoting four size options, ranging from "no neck" to "tall," with a colored indicator denoting set size clearly
- Sizing made easy by simply measuring patient's neck using finger widths and matching to the collar to determine the appropriate size
- Dual locking tabs on either side of the collar
- Locking mechanism and adjustment tracks ensure the selected size stays in-place while providing symmetrical alignment and collar stability
- Hook-and-loop closure strap attaches securely to the molded plastic on front panel
- Oversized trachea hole provides easy access for pulse checks, advanced airway procedures, and visibility
- Large opening in the rear panel allows for cervical palpation, drainage, and a clear view
- Integrated cannula hooks on either side properly secure supplemental oxygen devices and minimize the patient's discomfort related to tubing
- Packed flat to minimize storage space
- Ready-to-use, single-piece device; no assembly required
- Not made with natural latex
